

Why should I invest,
especially now?

Opening up a world of opportunity

Is cash still king?

By Fan Cheuk Wan

Chief Investment Officer, Asia
HSBC Global Private Banking and Wealth

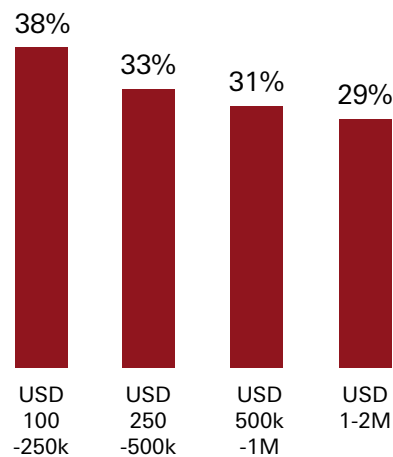

In the realm of investment, holding excessive idle cash represents a missed opportunity. Cash cannot harness the full potential of returns, leaving your long-term goals unmet. Moreover, because the value of cash depreciates over time, it fails to shield wealth from inflation. Nevertheless, many investors continue to allocate a significant portion of their portfolio to cash.

| % of assets held in cash

Asset allocation

By investable assets

By market

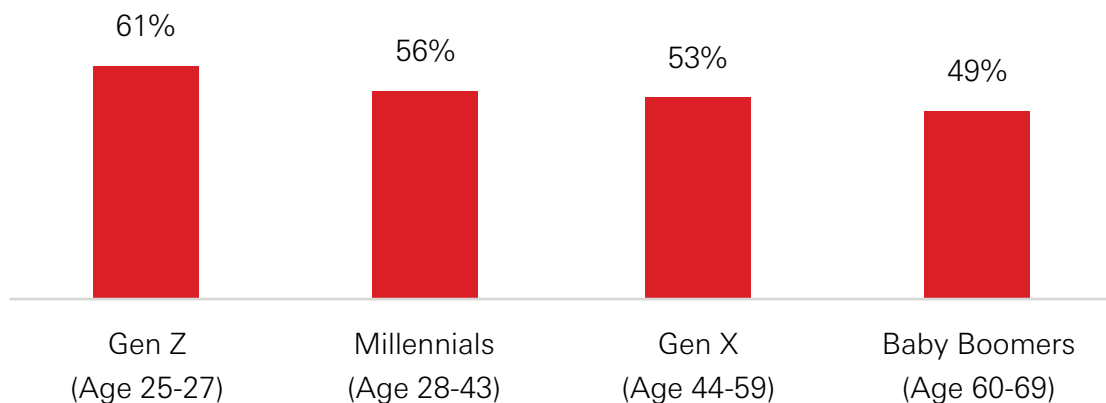

Cash holdings dominate investors' portfolios, ranging from 24% in India and Indonesia to 37% in the UK.

39% of the affluent investors who intend to change their portfolio allocations will invest more than half (54%) of the cash they're holding.

According to our latest Affluent Investor Snapshot 2024¹, 39% of affluent investors plan to adjust their asset allocations, while the remaining 61% don't plan to make any changes or have yet to decide to reassess their portfolios over the next year, potentially leaving them with a much larger allocation to cash. This entails risks.

Our analysis of investment returns over the past century reveals that cash is not the optimal strategy for long-term wealth creation. Historical data suggests that equities, bonds, real estate and certain alternatives such as private assets and hedge funds have consistently delivered higher returns than cash over the long term. We project that cash will yield an average return of 2.8% over the next decade, significantly underperforming compared to the expected return of 8% for developed market equities and a foreseeable 5.4% return of global investment-grade corporate bonds.

| Younger generations will invest a larger percentage of their cash holdings

¹The Affluent Investor Snapshot 2024, a Global Quality of Life special report by HSBC, delves into the investment portfolios, behaviours, and priorities of affluent individuals worldwide. Conducted in March 2024 through an online survey across 11 markets, this research captures insights from 11,230 affluent investors aged 25 to 69, each possessing investable assets ranging from USD 100,000 to USD 2 million.

What should I do with my cash?

In the next 6-12 months, investors can consider putting excess cash to work in a core allocation to bonds and equities in diversified portfolios. This can help generate a stable income stream and capital appreciation, while also providing portfolio diversification benefits. We expect that cash returns will start to come down later this year, since rate cuts are just a matter of time. Therefore, investors can adopt a smart approach by allocating their cash to bonds and multi-asset strategies now, while focusing on locking in attractive bond yields, which are near decade-high levels.

The improving global economic outlook supports our pro-risk investment strategy with overweight allocation to global equities and bonds for the next 6 months. The cyclical improvement should help profit growth spread beyond technology to other sectors, as illustrated by the strong US Q1 earnings season.

We see numerous opportunities in equities and bonds:

| Equities

| Bonds

US Treasuries

UK gilts

Investment grade bonds

Indian local currency bonds

The trade-off: liquidity vs returns

For investors who prefer to maintain higher liquidity in their portfolios and who are willing to accept a certain credit risk, short duration bonds should offer an attractive alternative to cash holding in generating a stable income stream. Short duration bonds are liquid fixed income securities with relatively short maturities from six months to three years. Bonds with shorter durations are less sensitive to interest rate volatility and are therefore less volatile in an uncertain rate environment.

Yields on short duration credit are now standing at near decade-high levels too, offering investors a defensive opportunity to capture income at low risk. Furthermore, cash flows from frequently maturing short-dated bonds can provide better liquidity than longer duration bonds and they generally carry less uncertainty because the principal is repaid more quickly and can be reinvested earlier.

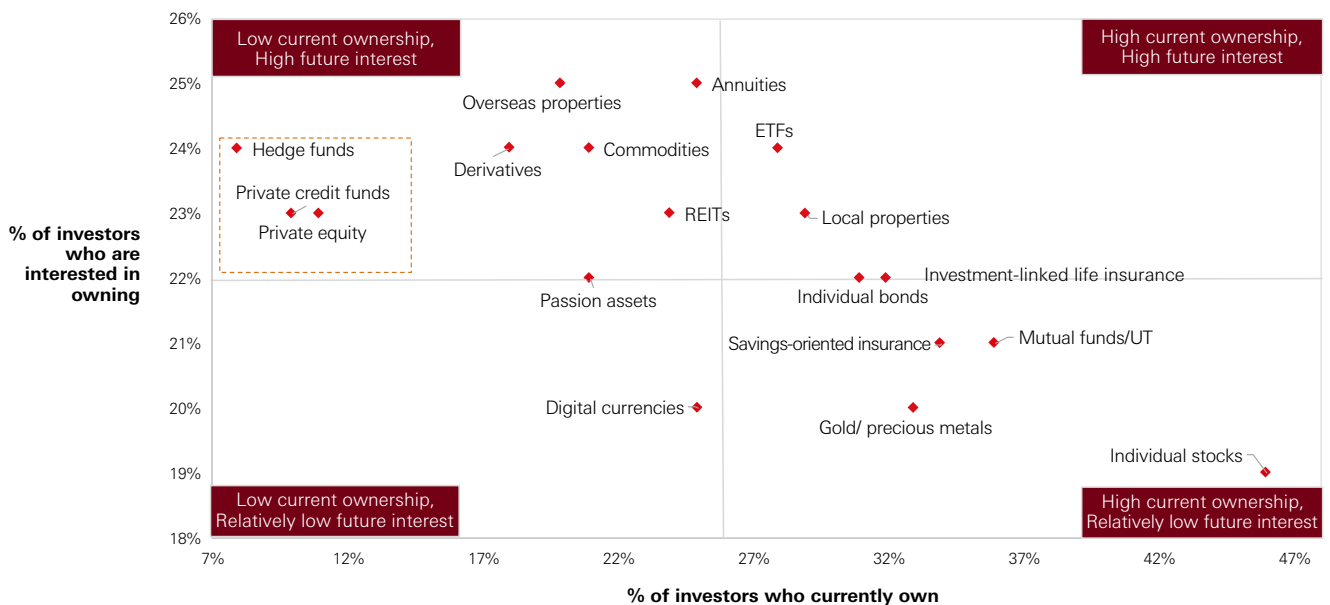

Unlike cash, short duration strategies are not entirely risk-free, but they offer an intermediate step out of cash into risk assets for a more cautious approach to seeking capital gain and higher income versus time on deposit. Historically, short duration bonds have generated lower total returns than other riskier asset classes, but they also court less volatility than other assets except for cash. In a rate-cutting cycle, short-dated bonds may be reinvested at lower yields.

There's relatively high interest in investing in alternatives asset classes such as hedge funds, private credit funds and private equity, etc.

Stepping beyond tradition

Investment products owned vs. intent to own

Markets will continue to worry about cyclical, interest rate and geopolitical risks. Ongoing geopolitical tensions and the unpredictable outcome of the US elections in November are wild cards fuelling volatility in the energy, commodity and currency markets. We think a strategic allocation to alternative investments as a core holding should add protection to portfolios and lower volatility via multi-asset risk diversification.

Alternatives asset classes including hedge funds, private equity, private credit funds, real estate and commodities have a lower correlation to traditional asset classes like stocks and bonds. Alternatives have proved to be effective portfolio building blocks in diversifying portfolio risks and enhancing portfolio resilience against market uncertainty.

For investors who look for lower entry thresholds and easier access to alternatives investment, multi-asset funds with core allocation to alternatives can provide convenient investment tools to build strategic exposure to alternatives. Multi-asset funds with allocation to alternatives can help improve the risk-return profile of portfolios by enhancing total returns through the access to a broader universe of investments and strategies.

In summary, we believe that now is the prime time to reassess your asset allocations to capture a broad set of opportunities. Holding excessive cash comes with a significant opportunity cost. The broadening of global cyclical and rate tailwinds at the moment provide ample opportunities to put cash to work and achieve greater returns.

Meet the expert

Fan Cheuk Wan is the Chief Investment Officer, Asia for Global Private Banking and Wealth at HSBC. Ms Fan is a member of the Global Investment Committee for Global Private Banking and Wealth and Chair of the Regional Investment Committee in Asia. In this role, she is in charge of the Chief Investment Office in Asia, responsible for developing investment strategies and themes across all asset classes for clients of Wealth and Personal Banking in the region. She is also responsible for investment content and regional product fulfillment strategies in Asia.

Ms Fan has 28 years of investment experience and she joined HSBC in April 2016. Prior to joining HSBC, she worked for Credit Suisse Private Banking, serving as Managing Director and Chief Investment Officer Asia Pacific, Head of Equity Research and Head of Research Asia Pacific. Ms Fan also held senior China equity research roles for 11 years in various brokerage firms.

Fan holds a Bachelor's degree in Social Sciences from the University of Hong Kong, an MA in Area Studies (China) from the School of Oriental and African Studies of the University of London and an MBA from the Imperial College Business School in London.

About the Affluent Investor Snapshot 2024: A Global Quality of Life Special Report by HSBC

The Affluent Investor Snapshot 2024, a Global Quality of Life special report by HSBC, delves into the investment portfolios, behaviours, and priorities of affluent individuals worldwide. Conducted in March 2024 through an online survey across 11 markets, this research captures insights from 11,230 affluent investors aged 25 to 69, each possessing investable assets ranging from USD 100,000 to USD 2 million.

You can read the full report here

Disclaimer

This report is issued and published by HSBC Holdings plc, 8 Canada Square, London E14 5HQ. HSBC Holdings plc and the HSBC Group (together, "HSBC") are not responsible for any loss, damage, liabilities or other consequences of any kind that you may incur or suffer as a result of, arising from or relating to your use of or reliance on this report. The contents of this report are subject to change without notice. HSBC gives no guarantee, representation or warranty as to the accuracy, timeliness or completeness of this report.

This report is for general circulation and information purposes only. This report is not prepared with any particular customers or purposes in mind and does not take into account any investment objectives, financial situation or personal circumstances or needs of any particular customer.

HSBC is a trademark of HSBC Holdings plc and all rights in and to HSBC vest in HSBC Holdings plc. Other than as provided above, you may not use or reproduce the HSBC trademark, logo or brand name. This report may not be distributed to any jurisdiction where its distribution is unlawful.

This report does not constitute and should not be construed as legal, tax or investment advice, solicitation and/or a recommendation of any kind from the bank to you nor is it intended to sell any investments, financial products or services or solicit purchases or subscriptions for them. You should not use or rely on this document in making any investment decision. HSBC is not responsible for such use or reliance by you.

Any market information shown refers to the past and should not be seen as an indication of future market performance. This article should not be used as the basis for any decision on taxation, estate, trusts or legacy planning. You should always consider seeking professional advice when thinking about undertaking any form of prime residential or commercial property purchase, sale or rental. It is important to note that the capital value of, and income from, any investment may go down as well as up and you may not get back the original amount invested. Past performance is not a guide to future performance. You should consult your professional advisor in your jurisdiction if you have any questions regarding the contents of this article.

No part of this document or video may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted, on any form or by any means, electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording or otherwise, without the prior written permission of HSBC Holdings plc.

© HSBC Holdings plc 2024. All rights reserved.